WIDE AREA NETWORK

Technology Management
for Automotive Dealership

There are multiple ways to secure and connect your wide-area network, giving dealerships flexibility in their network solution.
It is highly recommended that multiple levels of redundancy be implemented in order to ensure a stable connection.

Car Dealerships

2 different car dealerships are on massive properties spanning several acres, and have several distinct buildings for different sections or purposes.
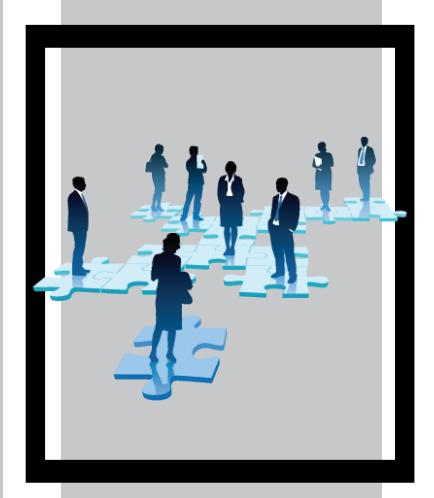

Their Challenges

A major struggle car dealerships face over a large physical area is network connectivity. Dealerships need to have files and applications accessible from anywhere on the property, and their networks need to be consistent and stable to be effective.

Our Solution for Client A

Attentus installed a fiber connection between the main store and their truck center to join the networks of both buildings. We established a wireless point-to-point system to connect their main building to the carwash building, providing network connectivity to the carwash system and extending the internal wireless system to cover the workspace. They also now have a redundant internet connection with VPN tunnels, allowing their public IP to be utilized if the primary connection goes offline.

CASE STUDY

Our Solution for Client B

Client B worked with Attentus to establish a point-to-point connection to link their main store and truck center networks. Another point-to-point connection was established between the truck center and the carwash building, to connect to the car wash system and extend the network into the building. Attentus set up client B with individual internet connections for each site on their property to allow for continuous connection if the connection is interrupted at another site.

The Results

Both clients can now work with peace of mind knowing that their internet and network connections are stable, reliable, and have redundant support. This allows them to focus on their jobs in any conditions from anywhere on site. Communication is streamlined, smooth and efficient between lot locations and purposes.
